All the Congressmen from Wisconsin are candidates for renomination.

The country is exceedingly anxious that the weather shall match the season.

"Long John," of Chicago, wants ex-Governor Kirkwood, of Iowa, for the Republican candidate for President in 1884.

Ex-Vice President Colfax comes to the defence of Anna Dickinson and asserts that she can act Hamlet. The Fond du Lac Commonwealth will please take notice.

There is this peculiarity about the canvass in Pennsylvania, that both Garfield and the Administration Republicans will take the stump in that State for the Regular Republican ticket.

The Republicans in Congress continue the good work of cleaning out Democratic members who took their seats through fraud. What Congress has done in this business covers a multitude of sins.

Mrs. Garfield has already commenced to refuse presents which would be of no particular use to her. Some kind gentlemen in Washington offered her a handsome house in Williamstown which she kindly refused to accept.

It is thought that Guiteau will be so overcome by fear and depression on the 30th that he will have to be fairly carried to the scaffold. Let them do as they did in Dr. Lamson's case, carry him along, and let the hanging go on.

It is said that Mrs. General Sherman is the only American to whom the Pope has ever given "the golden rose" a religious emblem instituted more than five hundred years ago. It has has been bestowed on Queens and Princesses, but never before on an American. It will be remembered that Mrs. Sherman once collected for the Pope a "Peterspence" of $60,000.

Charley Reed has about reached the end of the rope in the matter of trying to save Guiteau's neck. The decision of the District Court of District of Columbia is against the motion for a reopening of the case. The decision is short and to the point, as will be seen from the following, which embraces the entire decision: 'In the case of Guiteau, the judges who listened to the argument in that case have come to the conclusion that they have exhausted their powers upon it; that they have heard it patiently, fully and fairly, and that a re-argument would bring no other conclusion than that already arrived at, and they decline to reopen the case for the argument.

A proprietor of one of the mills in Pittsburg, and who is regarded as one of the best informed men in the iron business, said, a day or two ago in reply to a question as to whether he thought the strikers would succeed in having the new scale of prices adopted: "Oh, yes, I believe they will for the simple reason that the manufacturers are not prepared to fight the Amalgamated Association. There is no coercion among them There is nothing to hold them together. They will break before long, and one will follow the other in adopting the new order of things."

"How long will it be until that break begins?"

"I could not state any definite time of course. If the manufacturers remain shut down for sixty days they might as well not light their fires for the rest of the year, because if they do they will not have enough to do to keep them busy. Within that time the large contracts will all be placed, particularly those of Eastern capitalists, and they will give them to English manufacturers, and can be sure of having them filled within thirty days."

The United States Senate, if not punctilious, is certainly very careful in regard to the question of the propriety of the president pro. tem. to designate who shall preside in his absence. On Friday Judge Davis was absent from the chair, having gone to administer to the necessities of a sick colored servant, and designated in writing that Senator Ingalls, of Kansas, should preside. While not doubting Judge Davis' right to do this, the Senate looked upon the proceeding with considerable alarm, and to avoid the establishment of a precedent which it considered dangerous, decided to adjourn till Judge Davis' return which would prevent Mr. Ingalls from taking the chair. It was thought in case of the death of President Arthur and Judge Davis, then Mr. Ingalls, might succeed to the Presidency without having been elected by the Senate. It did not want to ratify Judge Davis' designation, and to relieve the Senate of a peculiar embarrassment, an adjournment was taken. When the Senate of the United States will take this course in such a matter it suggests the necessity of poperly providing by law who shall succeed to the office of President when the President and acting Vice President shall have been removed by death.

Nearly a Miracle.

E. Asenith Hall, Binghampton, N. Y., writes: "I suffered for several months with a dull pain through my left lung and shoulders. I lost my spirits, appetite and color, and could with difficulty keep up all day. My mother procured some BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS; I took them as directed, and have felt no pain since the first week after using them, and am now quite well." Price $1,00.

A SPECK OF WAR.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, June 5.—Fires were started last night in the mills of the Cleveland Rolling Mill company, and their declared intention to start up with non-union men this morning was carried out in part, although the force that went to work this morning was wholly inadequate to the work to be done. The officers of the company claim 1,000 non-union men went to work, but by actual count there were less than 300 unskilled laborers at work. It was expected there would be trouble when the men went to work this morning, and a detail of police was sent to the Eighteenth ward to quell disturbances. Shortly before seven o'clock a. m. the Bohemian laborers who had been engaged to take the place of the striking union men proceeded toward the mill. The street was filled with the strikers, but no warlike demonstrations were made, although about 100 of the non-union men were turned from their course. Less than 300 then went to work, but being unskilled, only a small amount of work was turned out.

The day passed quietly until the hour for closing the mill, when the non-union men were chased home by the strikers. Many small fights were indulged in, and knives and pistols brought into play to a limited extent, although no general row occurred. Those in a position to know claim that there will not be fifty non-union men who will dare to go to work in the morning. The display of non-union men to-day was certainly much smaller than had been anticipated, and the indications are that the strikers will by moral and physical suasion convince these that they don't want to go to work again in the morning.

The strike here has reached a cricis, and the next few days will decide whether the union men are to gain their point or not.

PITTSBURG, June 5.—The iron situation continues without material change. The latest incidents regarded by the workmen as indicative of their final success, a few days before the strike commenced Oliver Bros.' & Phillips, who employ 3,800 men, and are the largest manufacturers of specialities in the country, ordered repairs for their works which would require three months to complete. It is now stated that they will be ready to run within a month. Other manufacturers have also countermanded orders for extensive repairs. Working men are of the opinion that while manufacturers of this district want to resist the demand as long as possible, they have determined not to allow those of other districts to get the better of them, and on indication of a general break, they will quickly follow suit, in order to hold their trade. Several firms have already been compelled to buy Eastern iron to fill their contracts. The demand for iron has improved considerably since the strike, but manufacturers say this is the result of a panic among dealers who are afraid the strike will be of long duration.

TRAIN ROBBERS FOILED.

ST. LOUIS, June 5.—The Republican's Dallas (Texas) special says: About three o'clock this morning, when the north bound Missouri Pacific passenger train from Laredo to St. Louis was passing through the deep cut one mile north of Denton, it was signaled by a lantern and stopped. A train robbery on this line has been anticipated for some time, and the trains have heavily armed guards on them. When the train stopped four men, wearing pasteboard masks, sprang into the mail car with drawn pistols. First shots were without effect, but the robbers turned and ran up over the embankment of the cut, pursued by the guard. One of the robbers was seen to fall, spring to his feet again, and make to the brush in the darkness. The guards and the train men returned to the cars, and the train was backed down to Denton, where the alarm was given, and a posse of officers and citizens immediately organized and started in pursuit. The tain then proceeded to St. Louis.

To-day the dead body of one of the robbers was found a few hundred yards from the scene of the conflict, with his head and back riddled with buckshot. He was identified as S. P. Shelton, son of a respectable Johnson county farmer, living fifty miles from Denton. He was about 22 years old, and had been recently working on a farm near Denton. This evening another member of the gang surrendered to the police and is now in jail. His name is James Carter, son of a farmer near Denton. He says the robbery was planned by the two robbers who are still at large.

A FATAL ACCIDENT.

MADISON, June 5.—This afternoon a construction-train on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul road, was making a fly upon a side-track in a gravel-pit at Blue River, near Prairie du Chien. The engineer gave the train too hard a push before uncoupling his engine, and the cars went over an embankment at the end of the track, wrecking twelve cars, killing two workmen, and severely injuring four or five others.

MILWAUKEE, June 5.—A dispatch from Muscoda, Wis., reports a fatal accident on the Prairie du Chien Division of the St. Paul Road, three miles west of Blue River Station. A caboose was telescoped and one man killed outright, while three others were dangerously injured. Dr. Marks, of Milwaukee, was called to the scene.

THE ARMY BILL.

WASHINGTON, June 5.—It looks very doubtful now whether any exceptions to the compulsory retirement clause will be made. The Democrats are out of humor because the amendment offered to take in Hancock was defeated, and it is believed will now vote solidly against making exceptions of Sherman and Sheridan. It is believed that the rider will pass, however, in some shape, because nearly all the officers of the army and the Secretary of War are in favor of it. General Sherman and General Ingalls are opposed to it, but General Sheridan's friends are all working zealously for the measure, as it would place him in command of the army, and he is the most popular general officer in the service to-day.

POPE LEO'S REMARKS.

ROME, June 5.—On hearing of the death of Garibaldi, the Pope remained silent awhile and then, raising his eyes to heaven, said: "There has gone another figure of revolution. Oh, God! be merciful to him."

The Vatican organ, the Voce Della Verita, says: "Garibaldi was one of the most determined, but also the frankest, of our adversaries. Not from him came the heaviest blows and bitterest troubles. He was no hypocrite. May the prayers of his pious mother have soothed the last moments of her son's agitated life."

A Trip Into the Rocky Mountains.

NO. THREE.

The ride up the valley of the Arkansas River is by no means monotonous on the first trip. To the eye of the traveler there is continually presented a wide stretch of level land, with gentle swells with some distance back on both sides of the river. He is occupied, from early morning until late in the evening, in studying the same, and yet varying scenery along the route. He catches only occasional views of the stream, which runs in a steady and unbroken current through this region, while it descends fully 4,000 feet in it this side of the mountains. It rarely ever overflows its banks, even when it is highest amid the rains late in the summer. Usually patches of sand appear in its bed, covered over with white alkali deposits. Very few trees or shrubs, single or in clumps, are seen along the stream; and rarely away from it, except in the settlements and at the ranches. At first, new and thriving villages are passed, and farther on small hamlets of straggling houses. It is interesting to observe the homes and well-hedged fields of the farmers, gradually becoming less in number and located at greater intervals apart, until they wholly disappear; and in their places are now and then found the substantial buildings and cattle corrals of the ranchmen. A peculiar sense of freedom is experienced as one travels the western portion of Kansas, and realizes that he is beyond all fences or other enclosures of cultivated land, and can travel, in any direction over the next half of the continent, unrestrained except by the natural barrier of the country and by the houses and yards of a few villages and cities which he may chance to approach in the rugged and barren regime beyond. Such a feeling never entered my mind but once before, and that was some years since when standing at the extreme limit of the occupation of a seemingly boundless prairie by some families in Minnesota, and my eyes wandered over the vast section to the West, on toward the distant reservations of Sioux Indians, without a single dwelling or any other sign of human labor in sight.

The grass on all sides in the valley grows smaller and thinner, loses after a while its green color and looks seared and dead. Small bunches of wild sage and a species of the Mexican soap-plant begin to appear. The ground is dry and hard, the air is cooler, and somewhat exhilerating, and, on any extra exertion of the body, the breath is quicker and more labored. There are no clouds or mists in the sky, and the sunlight is dazzling. Still the broad, slightly undulating, and treeless plain lies ahead of us. We realize that we are under the control of unseen physical forces operating from a distance, and unlike those which are producing the side-branching cottonwoods, the thrifty fruit-orchards, and the bountiful wheat fields of eastern and central Kansas. Our curiosity is thoroughly awakened to discover the source of these forces in the high table-lands and mountain peaks beyond the western rim of the horizon.

It would surprise you to see the innumerable herds of cattle and occasional flocks of sheep, feeding along the banks of the Arkansas. I had never formed an adequate conception of the extent of the branch of industry which they represent, as pursued along the lines of the rivers on the plains thousands of miles north and south of us, and all along the eastern slopes of the Rocky mountains, and in the valleys between. The profit in this business must be immense. An old acquaintance of mine cleared this spring, $45,000 on an investment of less than three times that sum, in a nine months' operation of buying and selling three small herds of cattle in the Panhandle portion of Texas, just to the south of us. While conversing with him, I heard for the first time the word "rustler" so often used in this region, and in the mountains. He was describing the merits of the cows in one of his herds, which moved briskly about and picked up their food, and said they were "good rustlers." Soon after a seat companion saw some antilopes on a rise of ground a few rods from the train, and remarked incidentally that they were "rustling creatures." I found afterwards that the term is applied, in the mines and at the railroad stations, to a brisk and active business man, to the roving and discontented bands of Indians, and to the thieves and robbers who prowl about in the night time.

At many of the depots, the train takes on passengers who are starting either for the mining regions or for their ranches. Some are operators in the silver mines of Colorado and New Mexico; a few are the freighters, driving six and eight mule teams in the mountains; and others are cow-boys or owners of herds of cattle and horses, on their way to care for their stock and to attend "the round-ups" of these, which are just beginning to take place. Everywhere their friends, parting with them, would close with the hearty admonition, "Now take care of yourself." These men carry with themselves constantly the spirit of self-reliance and the sense of exposure to danger, such as the inhabitants in "the States" never realize.

This has been for centuries the great grazing region of the myriad herds of buffalos. Seldom are they now seen in the vicinity of the track. A robust hunter informed me that he could ride in twenty-four hours to a secluded place to the north, where a few could be found; and invited me to make the journey with him. With many thanks I declined for the want of time, though I confess that my longing for the adventure nearly got the better of my judgment. Only think of getting a shot at one of those mighty monarchs of the plains, and bringing him down with your cool and well-directed aim! But these animals, what remain of them, are mainly on the unfrequented and barren lands to the south, hundreds of miles away, in Western Texas and the adjoining portions of New Mexico. Their bones in the river bottoms hereabouts which they have abandoned, are now gathered, and car-loads of them are weekly shipped to the East. At a small station near the western boundary of Kansas, I saw large piles of these bones, blackened, solid-looking, and ready to be loaded on the freight-cars. For miles and miles in several places, our train crossed the parallel trails which the buffalos had trodden, in the years past, in the compact soil, as they traveled to the river to drink and the back to the numerous slopes to feed.

In the afternoon I was employed a good part of the time in watching the appearance and vanishing of many mirages ahead of me on the right and left. A large lake with its shores in clear outline would rise before the vision, then a section of large river with small groves of trees on its father bank, and again a vast marsh with spots of green herbage scattered through it, and also large pools of water in various parts. The illusions were perfect, and I thought how tantilizing they could be to a heated and thirsty traveler, at many points in these arid wastes.

The soil up the valley of the Arkansas seems to be composed in most places of those ingredients which would make it exceedingly fertile if only sufficient water could be applied to it. Notwithstanding its elevation above the sea, the atmosphere near the ground is made very warm by the sun in the day-time during the spring and summer. The question would now, and then, force itself upon me, "Why cannot this long strip of land on both sides of the river and for some distance back be irrigated, and thus converted into the most productive gradens and cornfields?" The stream falls uniformily on an average at least eight feet per mile, and the water could readily carried into the tops of the ridges from one to five miles from the river. What was my gratification to find on arriving at Garden City, where a small village is just starting in Western Kansas, that the experiment of irrigating the land on an extensive scale is here in operation. A ditch twenty miles in length has been dug, and the water from the Arkansas is conducted back into the high land, and runs down through ploughed fields and well tilled gardens. The yield here last year was very remmerative. I asked a recent settler who cultivates this season several forties, "How much does it cost to secure sufficient water for your land?" He replied, "A dollar an acre a year." I involuntarily said," That is cheaper rain, as you can have the sunshine nearly all the time, and don't have to wait in your work during the stormy days."

Night came upon us before we reached La Junita, in Colorado, where the Santa Fe railroad branches off for New Mexico and Arizona; and I intend to rest with the expectation of awaking in the morning in full sight of the Spanish Peaks and the Raton Mountains.

H A. PATTERSON, P. M

ZAMLOCH'S ASSISTANT.

The Tribulations of a Magician.

When Zamloch, the popular magician, was in San Francisco some time ago, says the Laramie Boomerang, he was short an assistant, and, as he had a big engagement at the Standard Theater, he had to skirmish around and get one on short notice.

Fate threw in his way a man whom we will call Higgins, because that was his name.

Higgins walked over to the magician's house and went through several rehearsals O. K., but at about a qurter of 8 in the evening, and while the orchestra was playing, he told Zamloch that he was so near-sighted that he couldn't tell across the street the difference between a black tom cat and the solar eclipse.

This seemed to throw a shade of sadness over the mind of the conjurer, for the assistant in a performance of this kind has got to be a man with every sense on the alert, and with a touch at once delicate and certain. It won't do to go across the stage like a blind mule, falling over chairs and knocking a choice illusion gallery west every few minutes.

The man who can't see ten feet with any degree of accuracy is liable to mar the magic of a choice performance, and the audience will see that, instead of being a supernatural power, it is only a club-footed assistant who ought to be skinning mules at $2 a week, who is doing the business.

So the professor told Higgins that he had better go down town and get him a pair of glasses, as he didn't want to expose all his expensive tricks to a San Francisco audience at regular prices of admission. He said he might want to use these same tricks again some time and he hated like blazes to give himself dead away while he was doing so well.

Just as the curtain rang up, Higgins came back with his goggles and joy was unconfined. He got along pretty well till there was an illusion introduced in which the magician took a bird cage and a lot of other furniture out of a portfolio lying on the table, winding up by picking a live boy out of the volume.

The portfolio lay on an ordinary table, and Zamloch had cut a trap-door underneath this, and provided Higgins, who was under the stage, with a short ladder. Upon a given signal the assistant was to open the trap, and, shoving up the ladder, scoot the boy through the table, the magician then taking him out of the portfolio to slow music and deafening applause.

Zamloch had taken out just before four or five large lithographs, and stood them up, carelessly like, against the legs of the table, when he gave the signal to his assistant to jab the boy through the floor and table into the portfolio.

Higgins, whose eyesight was about as good as that of a plaster cast of Milton, rammed the ladder up against the lithographs and knocked them down, so that the most attractive feature of the illusion was the dissolving view of a freckled-nosed boy shinning up a $2 ladder through the trap-door.

Most everybody in the theater seemed pleased about something except Zamloch, Higgins and the boy. The utmost good feeling seemed to reign throughout the audience.

Zamloch, however, seemed to have a preoccupied and far-away look. Higgins, too, seemed to feel as though perhaps he might have made a miss-lick somehow.

The boy thought the spectators were laughing at the red flannel conclusion of his shirt, which in the excitement had become disarranged, and was at that moment in perihelion with the disk of his pantaloons,

Zamloch said he would conclude the entertainment with a mirth-provoking illusion, in which he would ram a full-grown man into a double-barreled shot-gun and shoot at a mark. No one in the audience apparently hankering for the notoriety, the magician decided to use Higgins.

Higgins has not been seen in California since then, and the janitor, who found a large wart on the stage which he said he could identify, thinks that there has been foul play somewhere.—Boomerang.

Not Healthy.

A rather seedy-looking customer came into a restaurant on Austin avenue, and said to the proprietor: "What do you ask for a nice cooked beefsteak, well done, with onions?" "Twenty-five cents." "And the gravy?" "Oh, we don't charge anything for the gravy." "You don't? That's liberal. How much do you charge for bread?" "We throw in the bread." "Is it good bread?" "It is." "So you throw in bread and gravy?" "Certainly." "Then bring me some bread and gravy. It's not healthy to eat meat in summer."

PRECIOUS STONES.

The Characteristics by Which Jewelers Can Recognize Diamonds Handled by Them.

A New York reporter interviewed Mr. Andrews, of Tiffany's. "How are you to identify unset diamonds?" the reporter asked. "Here, now, is a diamond," he said, holding up a flashing yellow crystal as big as a pigeon's egg; "that is one of the remarkable diamonds of the world, and could be identified anywhere. It weighs 125 carats, and is worth $30,000. While yellow diamonds are plentiful, yet there are few with a clear, decided tint like this; and it is peculiar in its cutting, from the fact that it has two rows of facets from the girdle, or largest circumference of the stone, to the table, as the flat top of the stone is called. In the ordinary style of cutting a brilliant there is only one row of facets between girdle and table. Here is a diamond," picking up a brilliant clear as a drop of dew and flashing with colors like a rainbow, "that weighs only two and one half carats, and it is yet worth $1,500, from the fact that it is of the purest water. A diamond as notable as this we could positively identify from its characteristics. Here is another," picking up a yellow stone, "that weighs nearly as much, two and three-fourths carats, and is yet worth only $275, because of its color. Yellow diamonds are hard to identify by appearance, because they are so plentiful. Diamonds come of all colors, pink, blue and brown being rare and worth much more than yellow. The pure white, free from stain or flaw, is the most valuable of all. Odd colors are so rare that they afford a ready means of identification. Here is a black diamond," he said, holding up a large brilliant that oddly combined perfect transparency with a blackish tint; "this is one of the largest and best black diamonds in the world. It weighs five carats, and is worth $2,500. Now, here," picking up a beautiful diamond of a clear pink hue, "is a curiosity, that we could readily identify anywhere. It weighs eight carats, less a sixteenth, and is worth $5,000. The color is a rare one, and it is exquisitely pure. Here is another extraordinary diamond." He showed a large pearl-shaped stone of a cinnamon color. "That is an East Indian gem, and is very old. Although it weighs seventeen carats it is not worth as much as the smaller pink brilliant, on account of its color. Its value is $4,000. Such marked stones as those I have shown you we could positively identify by their characteristics. But there would be no means of identifying such stones as these," he said, as he poured a handful of small diamonds on the table. They were nearly all off color, and of small size.

"How, then, do you avoid mistakes and protect yourself against fraudulent claims when you take diamonds to set?"

"In the first place, we will have nothing to do with paste, no matter what price might be offered us to set it. Nobody in the store is allowed to wear a paste gem, and if by mistake a paste brilliant is taken in at the repair counter it is immediately sent back to the owner. That rarely happens. Some time ago, when we refused to reset a stone on the ground that it was paste, the owner was greatly surprised to hear that it was not genuine. The lady investigated the matter, and found that a dishonest servant had removed the diamond and substituted a paste gem. She had never known the difference, although an expert does not hesitate a moment in pronouncing upon the genuineness of a stone.

"When a diamond is brought to us," Mr. Andrews went on, "it goes immediately into the hands of an expert who gives it microscopic scrutiny. It is weighed, any chip or flaw is noted, and all these facts are recorded together with a little diagram indicating the location of the defects. Then it goes into the workman's hands. This enables us to be certain that we are returning exactly the same diamond that we take in. No one diamond in a thousand is free from flaws, so that there are always identifying characteristics. People are frequently surprised to find their diamonds have defects, but it is often the case that the cutter will leave in a flaw that can be covered by the setting, as very frequently the cutting out of a defect would lose a half a carat or more of weight."

"Will diamonds chip off in wearing?"

"Very rarely. You may lay a diamond on an anvil and strike it with a hammer and it will not break. At the same time a diamond has a grain, and a blow that happens to strike it along the line of cleavage may clip it. Most of the defects in stones are natural. Perfect pearls are even rarer than perfect diamonds. I recollect that a dealer once brought to us a collection of pearls valued at $250,000, and there was only one absolutely perfect one in the lot. The rarity of perfect pearls makes us consider this one of our most extraordinary pieces of jewelry."

He showed a pearl necklace, the pearls ranging in size from peas to filberts. They were all perfectly round, and some were iridescent. "Those we call Orients," he said, "and they are extremely rare. The necklace is worth $35,000."

New York English Spoken Here.

Although I knew scarcely a word of the Spanish language on my arrival at the main gulf seaport of the republic, I had little difficulty in getting along, as there was generally some one near at hand who could act as interpreter. In many of the stores in the City of Mexico the familiar European sign of "English spoken here" is displayed. One establishment varied the announcement as follows:

NEW YORK ENGLISH

SPOKEN HERE.

But this did not strike the tender chords of the hearts of our party with half the sentimental remembrance of home that was evoked when we came upon the sign made to rhyme:

Yankee gin, walk in;
Bourbon, rye, mind your eye.
Will you take a nip of rum?
Just step in, it's lots of fun.

"Le's go in 'er, Colonel," ejaculated one of the members of our company. "I 'gin to feel sorta as 'f I was to hum already. Le's have some Yankee drinks."

But the Colonel wouldn't go, having given up drinking long since, and but one or two were found who cared to step inside to shake hands with the Yankee author of the beautiful stanza given above.

Presently the refreshment partakers came out of the saloon, or whatever the place is called here. There was a look of disgust visible on the countenance of each and every one of them, while several clenched fists bid defiance to the air. It was some time before any of the drinkers would speak. Finally he who had been so anxious to taste "hum spirits" ejaculated:

"Damme! I hain't got over it yet. Thar wa'n't no Yankee thar, nor no hum likers. A —— Mexican jist give us pulky-pulqui, a native liquor—and we haven't got the stuff out of our mouths yet."

We afterward ascertained that the poetical sign was the work of an American practical joker, who persuaded the Mexican saloonkeeper that he would make lots of money out of American customers by displaying it.—City of Mexico letter.

"Let the Fool Remain."

Mr. Septimus Brightly was an aristocrat and a man of rank. He had held many offices of honor and of profit, and he deemed himself well worthy of all honor that had been conferred upon him.

This was the man who, somewhat late in life, took to himself a young wife. The woman whom he had thus chosen to honor was several years younger than himself. She was five-and-thirty and he five-and-fifty.

However, though younger, she was a widow, and possessed of considerable wealth. And she was quite handsome, also, beside being intelligent, witty and vivacious.

She had but one failing, one drawback, in the Honorable Septimus' estimation; she was Scotch by birth, and retained much of her native idiom and accent, of which habit her husband tried to break her.

More than once Mrs. Brightly had begged of her husband not to borrow trouble on account of her speech; but she laid it upon him most emphatically that he should not, under any circumstances, allude to her peculiarity of pronunciation in public.

For a time after this all went well. At length, however, the autocrat manifested himself. It was at an evening party, given by himself and wife, where many notables were present.

In the course of the dinner the lady called to a servant and bade him take away the fools (her pronunciation of fowls).

Said her husband, very pompously and pointedly:

"You mean fowls, my dear!"

"Oh, yes," she returned with a charming smile; then to the servant:

"John, you may remove the fowls and let the fool remain!"

It is doubtful if he ever ventured upon a like experiment again.—New York Ledger.

IN one of his verses, Oscar Wilde, the esthetic poet, alludes to "the barren memory of unkissed kisses." An unkissed kiss probably is the barrenest thing within the range of human experience.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Love of the Sun in California.

(From a San Francisco Letter.)

The houses of San Francisco are well adopted to the climate. Thick walls of stone or brick would keep out the sunlight, which is what the Californian wants more than anything else. That is why every house is studded and embossed with bay windows until all semblance of architectural beauty is lost. Every bay window increases the capacity for sunlight and air, and makes the house so much more pleasant and healthful. A house with bay windows always commands from $5 to $10 a month more than one of the same kind without them. Scientists say there is a certain actinic property in the sunlight here which is lacking in the east; so that a sun-bath every day is one of the best preservers of health and strength. Certainly Californians have the Spanish-American love of the sun, which is shown in the rich olive complexions that one sees in the majority of the children and in many of the faces of women on the street. The men would probably show the same features, but the tendency to shorten the time between drinks gives to a great many that glowing hue known as the "burning Moscow" complexion. In fact, if the truth must be told, there is an immense amount of liquor absorbed in the city.

Seven Hours a Corpse.

[From the Leavenworth (Ind.) Democrat.]

On last Wednesday William Elbert, while hauling wood for a lime kiln in Meade County, Ky., was thrown over a cliff by the oxen running away. He fell twelve feet and lodged on some rocks, but before he came to he rolled over another eight feet high, both times falling on his face. He was picked up by his friends at nine o'clock, A. M., and was taken to a neighbor's house, when medical aid was sent for, which was on hand in a few minutes and pronounced him dead. Arrangements were at once made for the burial, and the supposed dead man dressed and laid out. The relatives arrived at about 3 o'clock, and the grief-stricken old mother was mourning over the sad fate of her son, when all at once he raised to a sitting position, and said: "Why, mother, when did you come here?" The household was terribly excited, and it was some time ere they could be quieted enough to answer the question asked by the young man. His face was terribly swollen and bruised, and he was unable to move a muscle, but asked to be put in bed again. He described his feeling while in his trance as being that of sleeping, and tells of seeing faces of acquaintances who have been dead for years, but could not speak to them. Young Elbert was in this place last Monday, and seemed to be getting along all right and looking well, but was terribly bruised up.

OF 276 graduates of the Woman's Medical College of Philadelphia, 32 have died, 31 have given up their profession, and 151 are still practicing; 51 have been married since graduating, and 5 gave up on that account. The average income of those remaining in practice is about $3,000 per year.

Taking Care of the Cedars.

The cedars of Lebanon are now inclosed by a heavy wall, and the picknicking tourists who have been in the habit of building fires out of their twigs and against their trunks and distributing sardine boxes and scraps of paper under their shades will no longer offend travelers who feel a reverence for these relics of antiquity. It is the most enlightened thing the Turks have done for some time past, and we have to thank Rustem Pasha for it.

The Bosting Reporter.

Once a Chicago editor sent a wild and untutored son of the West, who wore his hair short and chewed plug tobacco, to an Eastern city to report a big horse race. Before the reporter went away the editor told him to look sharp when he got to the horse race, because there would be a lot of awfully smart reporters here from New York and Boston, and it would be great sport for them to "scoop" friendless and inexperienced young men from the West. So the reporter said he would try to keep up with the procession, and went away. When he got to the horse race he met a great many other reporters, one of whom was from Boston. This reporter was very cultured, but he didn't know a scalping boot from an overhead-check, and that is really the kind of culture that a man needs when he is writing about a horse race. The Boston reporter was very kind to the Chicago reporter and told him what a great city Boston was, and how smart a young man had to be before he could become a reporter there, and the Chicago reporter took another chew of plug tobacco and winked to himself. The Boston reporter asked the Chicago reporter if he had read Emerson's works, and the Chicago reporter said he hadn't—he had seen "Pinafore." Then the Boston reporter said: "Really, you astonish me," and went away to drink some Deep Rock water and smoke a cigarette. Then the Chicago reporter laughed heartily, and said in the reckless Wabash avenue way: "I wonder if that duck thinks I am a sucker that he can play on the end of a string. I should twitter that he will get left if he does." So he hunted up three other reporters and said to them: "Let's paralyze the gawk from Chicago." The other reporters were willing, and so they all wrote very long accounts of the races, going right from the track to the telegraph office, but the Boston reporter he went to his hotel and had supper, and then he went to his room, telling the clerk to send up a messenger boy about midnight. When the boy came the Boston reporter gave him a long dispatch, but when it reached the telegraph office there was so much other matter ahead of it that the wires were blockaded until four o'clock in the morning, and by that time it was too late to get a dispatch to Boston in time for the paper.—Chicago Tribune.

Soothing Repose.

The day emphatically belongs to earth; we yield it without reluctance to care and labor. We toil, we drudge, we pant, we play the hack-horse; we do things smilingly from which we recoil in secret; we pass by sweet spots and rare faces that our very heart yearns for, without betraying the effect it costs; and thus we drag through the twelve long hours, disgusted almost, but gladdened withal, that the mask will have an end, and the tedious game be over, and our visor and our weapons are laid aside. But the night brings freedom and repose; its influence falls cooly and gratefully upon the mind as well as the body; and when drops the extinguisher upon the light which glimmers upon the round, untouched pillow, we, at the same time, put out a world of care and perplexities. Leigh Hunt says: "It is a delicious moment certainly, that of being well nestled in bed, and feeling that you shall drop gently to sleep. The good is to come, not past; the limbs have just been tired enough to render the remaining in one posture delightful; the labor of the day is done. A gentle failure of the perceptions comes creeping over one; the spirit of consciousness disengages itself more and more, with slow and hushing degrees, like a mother detaching her hand from her sleeping child; the mind seems to have a balmy lid over it, like the eye; 'tis closing—more closing—'tis closed. The mysterious spirit has gone to make its airy rounds."

A Curious Love Story.

There abides in the mind of woman an overwhelming sense of the importance of having an ample trousseau. Witness the case of a young woman in Dortmund, Germany, a short time since, who was arrested for stealing a gold watch and chain from her affianced lover, who on discovering his loss, had placed the matter in the hands of the police, without the faintest notion as to who was the thief. The maiden, with many tears, confessed that she had taken the watch, so that by pawning it she might raise money enough to buy her wedding dress, which she could get in no other way. Thereupon the despoiled but magnanimous bridegroom spoke out in court, declared that "the prisoner was his only love; and that he would marry her out of hand if the judge would consent to set her at liberty." Without delay the tribunal annulled the arraignment, and the generous lover carried off his liberated larcenist in triumph.

Lemon Culture in Florida.

Florida lemons have not generally found favor in Eastern markets, owing to their large, thick skins and inferior flavor. A few individuals, however, who believed the soil of Florida adapted for the culture of that fruit as well as oranges, have been experimenting with lemon seedlings imported from Sicily and Messina, and planted them, it is claimed, with perfect success. A writer from Lake Poinsett says:

"The lemon produced had much of the size of the old Florida fruit, but was thin-skinned, of bright golden color, and juicy beyond comparison. They at once took rank in market as the best lemons that were offered, and commanded a premium. Sales are reported for certain months of last season at $12.25 a box of 160 lemons. A peculiar fact of lemon culture is that the imported lemon can not be raised in Florida from the seed. Any seed will do for the stump, but to produce the perfect fruit the stump must be budded from the imported tree. The advantages of lemons over oranges are that the trees bear sooner; they bear larger crops, the fruit ripening continually for eight months, instead of a few months as is the case with the orange. Another advantage is that the season is longer than the orange, and the opportunity for marketing at good figures better.

"Since the culture of the lemon has become general the Floridians have learned the method of preparing the fruit for the market. The evenness of size so notable in a package of foreign lemons is secured by the use of a ring or 'sizer.' On the Mediterranean lemons are never left on the tree until they get their color. An attendant goes to each tree, passes a ring over each lemon, and when it fits the ring it is clipped and put in a packing house, where the bright yellow color is given them by subjecting them to fumes of sulphur. A packing house of this sort has been established by a Mr. Bean, at Jacksonville. He buys the lemons when green at about a cent and a half each, gives them the artificial coloring, and sells them for a handsome advance.

The Notice Which Great Men Like.

Agassiz was pleased when he had an audience of plain farmers; and Chalmers felt proud of his success when he found that an ignorant yeoman among his hearers perfectly understood his sermon.

In 1836 a gentleman of Massachusetts, when in England, met a distinguished personage, one of the nobility, who made many inquiries respecting the learned and literary men of the United States. The names of quite a number who had received a high reputation were given and their acknowledged merits recited.

When the name of Dr. Bowditch was mentioned, he instantly spoke in terms of admiration of his character and labors, and gave him a high position in the world of science. Indeed, his language showed that he was an enthusiastic admirer of the doctor.

On his return to the United States the gentleman who had listened to his compliments, and who indulged in a commendable pride in hearing such testimony from a foreigner, laudatory to the great mathematician, took pleasure in calling on Dr. Bowditch to report the interview, as calculated to gratify him. He was cordially received and after the usual exchange of compliments, the interview and the language of the nobleman were given. The docter listened with fixed attention without speaking a word. When he had heard all he looked away for some moments as if intent upon some problem requiring careful solution.

He was evidently affected, and in what way the reader may more easily conjecture than language can describe.

He looked up with tears in his eyes and with evident emotion and remarked,—

"Mr.——(calling the gentleman by the name), the highest compliment I ever received and which affected me most deeply, was contained in a letter from a humble stranger, a backwoods-man teacher, pointing out a slight typographical error in the edition of my translation of 'La Place.' The fact that my book was so accurately read by such a man in my own country, a man unknown in the world of science, affected me more than any compliment I ever received from distinguished men."

A more beautiful example of humility is seldom found.

Nearly a Miracle.

E. Asenith Hall, Binghampton, N. Y., writes: "I suffered for several months with a dull pain through my left lung and shoulders. I lost my spirits, appetite and color, and could with difficulty keep up all day. My mother procured some BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS; I took them as directed, and have felt no pain since the first week after using them, and am now quite well." Price $1.00.

Buried Treasure.

During the war Dr. J. H. Conn buried on his farm near Franklin, Tenn., for safety, two vessels, one containing his silver spoons, etc., and the other about $1000 in gold, silver and paper currency. Time and change brought forgetfulness, and when the war was over, and the country became more settled, he searched in vain for his buried treasures. A few days ago the worthy old man died, and in digging his grave a vessel was found which answered to the description of the one in which he had placed his silver spoons. The vessel was empty, however, and it is supposed that he had been watched by some persons who afterward stole the silver and replaced the vessel. Last week the other vessel was unearthed, near the place where Dr. Conn was buried, and when opened was found to contain $800 in gold and silver and a mass of rotten paper, sufficiently preserved, however, to show that they had once been bills on the Planters' Bank of Tennessee.

Ye Olden Time.

The old, legitimate, delightful idea of an inn is becoming obsolete; the rapidity with which distance is consumed obviates the needs that so long existed of by-way retreats and halting places. The modern habit of travel has infinitely lessened the romantic probabilities of a journey; the rural ale-house and picturesque hostel now exist chiefly in the domain of memory; crowds, haste and ostentation triumph over privacy and rational enjoyment. Old Walton would discover now but few of the secluded inns that refreshed him on his piscatorial excursions; the ancient ballads on the wall have given place to French paper; the scent of lavender no longer makes the linen fragrant; instead of the crackle of the open wood fire we have the dingy coal smoke, and blinds usurp the place of snowy curtains.

Few hosts can find time to gossip; the excitement of a stage-coach arrival is no more, and a poet might travel a thousand leagues without meeting a romantic "maid of the inn," such as Southey has immortalized. Jollity, freedom and comfort are no longer inevitably associated with the name; the world has become a vast procession that scorns to linger on its route. Thanks, however, to the conservative spell of literature, we can yet appreciate, in imagination, at least, the good, old English inn. Indeed, it is quite impossible to imagine what British authors would have done without the solace and inspiration of the inn. Addison fled thither from domestic annoyance; Dryden's chair at "Will's" was an oracular throne; when hard pressed Steele and Savage sought refuge in a tavern and wrote pamphlets; Sterne opens his Sentimental Journey with his landlord; Shenstone confessed he found "life's warmest welcome at an inn."

The most characteristic scenes of Scott and Dickens occur on this vantage-ground, where the strict unities of life are temporarily discarded, and its zest miraculously quickened by fatigue, hunger, singular mood of adventure and pastime, nowhere else in civilized lands so readily induced.

"Convalescent?"

A country physician of limited sense and "limi'eder" education, was called to see Mr. R.'s little boy, who was quite ill. He gave some medicine and left, promising to call again on the following morning. When he arrived Mr. R. met him at the gate and informed him that the child was convalescent.

"Conva'escent?" said the doctor, "convalescent? Then if he is that bad off you'll have to cali in some other physician; I never treated a case of it in my life!" And with that he mounted his horse and departed.—Detroit Free Press.

IT IS SO PLEASANT—It is so certain and easy in its action. It invigorates the nerve, brain, and muscle. ZOPESA does these things simply by giving active Digestion, and regulating the Stomach and Liver.

A POPULAR TONIC

For Weak Lungs and Consumption

No preparation ever introduced to the American public, for the relief and cure of Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Debilitated Constitutions, Weakness of the Lungs, or Consumption in the incipient or advanced stages of the disease, has ever met with the indorsements of physicians or patients as the celebrated "Tolu, Rock and Rye." The repeated and continued sales of the article everywhere are the best evidence of its real merits. Letters and testimonials from every quarter of the country, attesting the stimulating, tonic and healing effects, are in possession of the proprietors, and can be adduced to convince the most skeptical reader of its intrinsic virtues. Further commendation is unnecessary and superfluous, as a trial of this article, having a pleasant taste and agreeable flavor, will satisfy all those who are afflicted or pining away with pulmonary weakness of the relief to be secured by the use of Tolu, Rock and Rye.—Chicago Times. dec21deod8m

—Mr. Oscar A. Janes, of Hillsdale, Michigan, delivered a memorial oration at Quincy, in that State which has had a wide reading and has been highly praised. Mr. Janes is well known in Janesville, and has many relatives in this county. He is now engaged in the practice of the law at Hillsdale and is meeting with deserved success. In regard to his memorial address, the Quincy Herald says: "Hon. Oscar A. Janes, of Hillsdale, a one-armed soldier whom the people of his own county delight to honor, was then introduced and delivered one of the best, if not the best, address ever made on a like occasion in Quincy. With a clear and distinct voice, perfect enunciation, and words filled with patriotic sentiment, the speaker held his vast audience without trouble, though there were hundreds unable to catch every word, and when he closed the feelings of perfect satisfaction with the effort gave vent to a considerable applause."

—For the first time in its history, Janesville is to have a grain exchange, which will be under the management of A. M. Wright & Co., of Chicago. Mr. A. L. Brown came up from Chicago yesterday to look the field over and decided to establish such an exchange. Accordingly rooms were leased in Eldred's block, on the same floor with and adjoining the city telegraph office. These rooms will be put in thoroughly good condition at once, and by next Monday the grain exchange will be opened for the reception of market news and the transaction of other business. Market reports will be received every half hour during the day for some time, and if the condition of business warrants it, they will be taken every three minutes, as in many other places. This is an important enterprise, one which will prove of great benefit to all interested in the ups and downs of the markets. It is hoped that A. M. Wright & Co., will find a sufficient activity in the grain circles here to insure the permanence of the exchange.

The Council Proceedings.

The common council held a regular meeting last evening, at which all the aldermen were present except Murdock and Robinson. Nothing of special importance was done, although a good deal of routine business was dispatched. The street commissioner made his report, and in it was one recommendation which is especially worthy of note, that in regard to the road where the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway runs near to and parallel with it, in the Fifth ward, which the commissioner recommends be so widened and filled with rubble that there shall be in its narrowest place a good smooth road bed not less than four rods in width.

The street commissioner also recommended the building of several sidewalks in various parts of the city.

Two petitions were received by the council from property owners on Bluff street for the grading of that portion of Bluff street between South First and South Third, and the grading was ordered done.

The committee on gas light reported against the use of oil street lamps in the Third ward.

The old bill of Mr. Peter Myers amounting to $200 for damages and rent of rooms for the municipal court in Young America block, was allowed and an order drawn for the amount.

By an order introduced by Alderman Potter, the platform in front of engine house No. 1, and the horse stall in the engine house, were ordered repaired.

An order was also adopted authorizing the graveling of Washington and Madison streets in the First ward.

On motion of Alderman Valentine the street commissioner was directed to repair with rubblestone North Main Street between North First and Court streets, and Milwaukee street between the bridge and Main street.

Specifications for the grading of Bluff street in the Third ward were read, and on motion of Alderman Valentine, the city clerk was directed to advertise for bids to do the work.

Alderman Cox moved that the salary of the health officer of the city be fixed at $200 a year, but the matter was referred to the board of health with a request that it report at the next meeting.

City Attorney Hyzer presented a written opinion to the council showing why the council could not, under the charter, revoke the license of N. Henderson for gambling in his saloon, and holding that if the council did proceed, it should be under the general State law.

Mr. Booth and Wool Growing.

Mr. William Booth, formerly of Janesville, and well known here and throughout the county, is engaged in growing wool in Kansas, his farm being in Jefferson county. The Leavenworth Daily Slandard gives Mr. Booth the following notice: "Mr. Booth has just finished shearing his flock of one hundred and forty-three thorough-bred Merinos, which yielded 1,549 pounds of wool—an average of ten pounds and thirteen ounces per head, which shows what can be done in growing wool in this part of the State. A great deal of this success is due to the careful management of Mr. F. L. Gibbs, formerly of Whitewater, Wis., who has been in the sheep business for nearly twenty years. Mr. Gibbs is interested with Mr. Booth in the flock."

The Weather.

REPORTED BY PRENTICE & EVENSON, DRUGGISTS.

The thermometer this morning at seven o'clock stood 57 degrees above zero, and at one o'clock at 74 degrees above, Clear. For the corresponding time last year the thermometer stood 52 and 57 degrees above, and rained nearly all day.

WASHINGTON, June 6, 1 a. m.—The following are the indications for this region to-day:

Lake region, upper Mississippi and Missouri valleys—Warmer and generally fair weather, southeast to southwest winds, and falling barometer, preceded in the eastern portions of the lake region by rising barometer.

Anna Dickinson's Hamlet.

Next Friday evening Miss Anna Dickinson will appear at Myers' Opera house in the character of Hamlet. There never was a Hamlet in this country that has produced more criticisms than Miss Dickinson's. She has been recognized for more than eighteen years as the finest female orator in this country; and the fact that this pretty little body announced herself to appear as Hamlet, created a good deal of interest in all the large cities where she had been heard and was known, and since she has taken the stage to impersonate the immortal Prince of Denmark, large audiences have flocked to hear her, and the criticisms have been varied as the minds and dispositons of her hearers. The New York Tribune says:

"Her voice, he manner, the very life she gave to the part, were effeminate, and not once could one lose conciousness of the fact that it was a female interpretation of the character, but her reading was made marvelously impressive at time, and without extravagance it may be said that the mental interpretation was a revelation. She was at her best in the soliloquies, and her dramatic action was suprisingly good. She has certainly made a comparative success, but the propotions it will assume future can only decide."

A New Drug Firm.

Mr. W. G. Palmer and Charles D. Stevens, have purchased the drug stock of Mr. A. J. Roberts, and will take possession to-morrow. The stand, on the corner of Main and East Milwaukee streets, in Jackman's block, is an old one and well known, and we bespeak for the new firm a prosperous business. Both Mr. Palmer and Mr. Stevens are well known in Janesville and throughout the county, and their friends will be glad to hear of their association in the drug and medicine business.

Mr. A. J. Roberts, who has carried on the business here for several years, purposes to make his home hereafter in Dakota, but just where he will settle is not definitely known to him. He will probably leave to-morrow for that Territory, and will visit Plankinton, Huron, Mitchell, and Wessington. He has 160 acres of land within two miles of Wessington, and owns some property in Plankinton and may decide to locate at or near one of these places. He purposes to engage in farming and stock raising, and is confident of success. He will carry with him the best wishes of many friends in Janesville.

The County Government.

The County board of supervisors met in special session this afternoon, and the members, thirty-one in number being present.

The choice of chairman of the board for the ensuing year fell upon Mr. J. C. Metcalf, he receiving 27 votes against 4 scattering. This exceedingly flattering vote is a mark of honor over which Mr. Metcalf and his friends in Janesville may very justly feel proud. He acknowledged the compliment in a very neat and appropriate speech.

The proceedings this afternoon were brief and of a miscellaneous character, and nothing of special importance was transacted. A motion was carried that when the board adjourn this afternoon it adjourn till to-morrow morning at nine o'clock, and probably in the meantime the chair will appoint the committees and announce them at the opening of the session in the morning.

It is worthy of note that the body composing the county government for Rock, is made up of the most substantial and intelligent men in the county, and in personal appearance, business capacity, and general information, will compare most favorably with any other like body in the State.

Milton.

—Decoration Day was well observed here, despite the fact that rain threatened to interfere with the exercises. At two o'clock the college students, headed by the cadets, marched down to the Seventh-Day Baptist church, it having been decided to hold the exercises there, on account of the threatening appearance of the sky; but as the edifice was not large enough to accommodate one-half of those in attendance, an adjournment was taken to the park, where an audience numbering six or seven hundred gathered around the band stand upon which was seated in addition to the Cornet band, the president of the day, Rev. W. T. Millar, and the speaker of the day.

The following was the programme of exercises:

Prayer—Rev. E. M. Dunn.
Reading—Miss C. M. Dunn.
Miss Dunn read a portion of the address delivered by Colonel R. G. Ingersoll, at Indianapolis, on a similar occasion, in a charming manner.
Address—"Causes of the War"—Prof. J. C. Bartholf.
Music—Band.
Address—"The Soldier in the War"—F. C. Buten.
Address—"Results of the War"—Rev. Dr. Williams.
Music—Band.

A procession was then formed in the following order, under the direction of Chief Marshal, W. P. Clarke: Band, cadets, president of the day, and speakers, veterans, decorating committees, students and school children, and citizens, and marched to the cemetery, where the band played a dirge while the committees covered the graves of the soldier dead with beautiful wreathes and boquets. The procession was nearly a quarter of a mile in length and contained a large number from out of town. Much credit is due to the ladies and young people for their labor in procuring and arranging the flowers; to the few who did the necessary labor in arranging and planning for the day's observance, to the speakers for their services, to the College Cadets and to the general public for their presence.

—The silver wedding anniversary of Prof. A. Whitford and wife occurred last Wednesday, and as Mr. Whitford was not at home, the friends decided not to make them any formal visit, but surprised Mrs. Whitford by presenting herself and husband with a dozen each of the best triple plated knives and forks. The other gifts, not including those from the family, were: A silver plated cake basket and silver plated pickle caster, from the ladies and gentlemen students of the college; glass fruit dish, Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Baldwin; and napkin rings, Messrs. C. E. Crandall and W. H. Cory.

—The case of Wm. Oates vs. David Smith and J. B. Anderson garnishee defendant, was on trial before Justice Clarke, last Wednesday. William Smith appeared for plaintiff and J. W. Sale, for defendants. The court rendered a verdict for the defendant.

—Dr. Allen has improved his residence by building a neat veranda across the front. The Weavers did the job in their usual good style.

—Hon. J. Davis and wife, of Rockford, Ill., were in town last week visiting relatives.

—Ezra Crandall returned from Chicago last Saturday night.

—Owing to the inclemency of the weather the proposed picnic of Saturday, June 3d, to Lake Koshkonong had to be abandoned, although a great disappointment to the party of ladies who had so kindly provided everything necessary for a pleasant time, for themselves and their invited company of the sterner sex. Determined not to have it prove a total failure they compromised matters by notifying the gentlemen early Saturday morning that supper would be served at the parlors of the M. E. church at 8 o'clock p. m. The guests well knowing the delicacies in store for them were all present at the appointed time and enjoyed an excellent supper. After the feast games were indulged in till late in the evening, when the ladies tendered their company to the gentlemen, and escorted them to their several abodes. Forgetting a few haps and mishaps which are ever won't to occur, it can be said that it was one of the merriest parties of the season.
